

PGA Day ... Raises Over $27,000 in Support of Prostate Cancer

PGA Professionals in all Atlantic Canada provinces came together to raise awareness and provide support in the fight against prostate cancer. Teeing it up in various formats on various days, PGA Professionals united under the umbrella "PGA DAY".

In only its second year, PGA Day will raise over $27,000 for Prostate Cancer Canada Atlantic.

Peter Mallette, Executive Director of PCC Atlantic, and Lindon Garron, Executive Director of PGA Atlantic, both survivors, and their respective organizations thank those who took part in the event ... PGA Professionals, their amateur partners and all of the gracious people who donated.

Peter Mallette (PCC Atlantic Executive Director) and Jim Ogilvie (PGA Atlantic Past President)

Many female PGA professionals and women in general have acknowledged that this is not just a male disease but rather a disease that touches entire families. Many female PGA professionals acknowledge that their husband, father, brother, grandfather, etc. could be affected by the disease.
